BURDEN THIEVES ARRIVE.

GREATER PART OF THE STOLEN JEWELS COME WITH THEM.

810,000 Worth Still Missing Mr. Bur-den's Former Butler and Pootman, with the Detectives Who Had Them in Charge, First-cabin Passengers on the Germanic. The two former servants of Mr. I. Townsend Burden who are charged with having stolen from Mrs. Burden jewels valued at $50,000 or more arrived yesterday on the steamship Germanic in charge of Detective Sergeants Evanhoe and McCauley. They are William Robert Dunlop, an Englishman, who had been Mr. Burden's butler, and William Turner, an Irishman, who had been first footman. The prisoners set sail with the two detecrest on April 16 to the time of their sailing they were confined in Halloway jail in London. On May 27 they were taken from the jail to Liverpool and put on board the ship. Detective Inspector Froest and Detective Sergeant Allen of Scotland Yard accompanied them as far as Queenstown. The English detectives left the ship there, but will probably Quite elaborate arrangements were made by the Police Department for the reception of the prisoners. In the morning Detectives Madden and Nethercott were sent to Quarantine to board the steamer there, while Detectives Reap, Holland, Mechan, Daly, and Formosa were sent to the White Star line pier.

When the Germanic swung into her dock the two Central Office men who had gone to Quarantine were seen on the hurricane deck with the rest of the cabin passengers. Between them was a good-looking man, evidently English, who was chatting and laughing. One of the Central Office men on the pier immediately pointed him out as Dun-lop, and all the rest concurred in his statement. All the newspaper artists started straightway to sketch him as he stood there waving his cap, and the people on the pier marvelled at his nerve in putting on such a good face with Sing Sing in the near future. The second man to come down the gangplank was this self-same Engilshman, and he narrowly escaped immortality by having his pit-ture in half a dozen papers this morning with the name of Dunlop underneath it. Both little without saying very much. They had been instructed by their English counsel to say nothing. Dunlop said that he had seen the Burdens, but had not talked to them.

"Have you engaged any counsel yet?"

"No." he replied. "We have English counsel, and he will probably come over here and attend to that."

"While at sea they had pretty nearly the yun of the ship, although either McCauley or I watched them all the time. Just as we were leaving Queenstown I told them if they wanted to jump overboard to do it then, because it would be easier to fish them out in the harbor than at sea. They laughed and said they didn't intend to do anything of that kind. At night I slept with Puniop in the lower berth, as did McCauley and Turner. We slept on the outside to guard against any possible to the said of the season of the said of the

"We had our meals in the saloon with the rest of the cabin passengers, but sat by oursilves at the end of one of the long tables. We played quoits and other games and didn't hive such a bad time of it."

"How were you treated in England?"

"Oh, very well, indeed. Everybody was very nice to us. We left here on the Campania on April 23 and got in London on May I. After the examinations in the Bow Street Court, the prisoners were remanded to Halloway jail for lifteen days, during which time and until the steamer salled we had nothing to do but go sight-seeing."

About an hour after the steamer had tied up to her pier a closed carriage drove up to the gangulank, and the two men in charge of the detectives entered it and were driven to the Mott atreet entrance to Police Hoadquarters. They were taken at once into Capt. O'Brien's private office, where they remained for a short time, and then had their pedigrees taken. After that they were locked up for the night, it had been the original intention to take them to court for arraignment, but it was so late when they arrived that it was decided to wait until today.

This morning they will be taken before Justice Cowing in Part I., Court of General Sessions, and arraigned. Assistant District Attorney Lindsay, who arrived on the Lahn on Wednesday, said that Dunlop would ulead guilty. When asked about this resterday, Dunlop only lanched and said that he hadn't told Mr. Lindsay anything of the kind.

On the same steamer that brought the two suspected men came the part of the lewels that were recovered. The London police, after they had been identified by Mrs. Burden nurned them over to Detectives Evanhoe and McCauley. They put them in the care of Rose, Morton & Co. of London, who shipped them in bond to Morton, littes & Co., of this city. A complete inventory of the gems recovered shows that about $10,000 worth are yet missing.

in Hatton Gardens. The lodgings of the men were rearched and a large part of the stolen Burden jewels was found in them.

At first the Scotland Yard people did not connect the men with the Burden robbery, and it was not until Turner said that he had been employed as footman in a wealthy New York family that they did so. After that Mr. Buchanan Winthrop, a friend of the Burdens, who was in London looking after their interests, identified the jewels as belonging to Mrs. Burden.

The New York police were notified and Mr.

Bunlop and Turner were respectively butler and first footman in the Burden household at the time of the robbery on Pec. 27 last. The local police declared from the very first the robbery was one of the "inside" kind, and they say that they watched the two men constantly, Dunlop particularly. But they didn't think it worth while to arrest them. Early in March Dunlop notified Mr. Burden that he was sick of America and was going home, and on March 28 he sailed in the Campania. Turner had previously left the Burdens, pretending to be offended at having been suspected. He went to England and was searched on the steamer before he left. Dunlop is supposed to have taken the jeweis with him. After their departure they were not heard of until their arrest on were not heard of until their arrest on

CAVALRY DRILL AT WEST POINT.

The Graduating Class Go Through What is Known as the School of the Trooper. WEST POINT, June 4 .- The examination of the first-class in Spanish, the second class in chemistry, mineralogy, and geology, and the written examinations in mathematics and French were concluded to-day. The Board of Visitors made tour of inspection this morning.

The class of '90 went through their last cavalry drill as cadets this afternoon. Capt. Parker was in command of the troop. At 4:45 o'clock the lads, dressed in tight-fitting gray trousers and blouses, with buff leggings which reached almost to their knees, assembled in the area of the barracks, and marched down the time-worn path to the riding academy, the floor of which had been covered with six inches of tan bark.

The exercise, which is known as the school of the trooper, is very exciting, and is intended to show the skill of the rider in handling horses. Hurdle jumping was a prominent feature of the drill. At the command of the officer a cadet would leave the detachment, jump on a horse, and, tearing away on a wild gallop, strike with his sabre at the dummy heads which were placed on posts to represent the enemy. Each cadet in turn went through this managure, the class then went through representative mounted and dismounted the barebacked animals with the sgillty of circus riders. When the command of "At will" was given, the cadets performed all kinds of extraordinar, feats. The hurdles were placed for both high and low jumps. The height varied from three to five feet. The drill was a very pretty one, and greatly delighted the spectators.

His nearest neighbors remonstrated and obtained injunctions against him, which, they say, he ignored.

When they learned that Sneider intended to put into the new building a press weighing about 3,000 pounds a committee went to the Building Department and made a formal protest. YERKES AGAIN ARRESTED. HE DRIVES ABOUT UNTIL HE OWES A CABMAN $4.50.

No Money, He Gets Cabby to Drive to His Wife's House-She Has Them Arrested for the Bow They Make-Cabby Not Held-Terkes Put Under $1,000 Ball,

Edward F. Yerkes of 1,716 North Sixteenth street, Philadelphia, who was locked up at the West Sixty-eighth street station house on Saturday night on the complaint of his mother-inlaw, Mrs. Jane Morgan, of 161 West Seventy-fifth street, and was discharged in the Yorkville Court Sunday morning, was arrested again early yesterday. On Saturday night he went to see his divorced wife, Mrs. Morgan's daughter, and raised such a rumpus in the house that Mrs. Morgan sent for a policeman. When the case came up before Magistrate Crane, however, no one appeared to press a complaint agains

Evidently thinking that neither his divorced wife nor his mother-in-law would appear in a police court, Yerkes indulged in another escapade on Wednesday night. According to his story, he wanted to drink himself to death because his one-time wife wouldn't marry him over again. After making things interesting at 161 West Seventy-fifth street during the early evening, he wandered down town, and, shortly before 12 o'clock, engaged Cabman Frank Callahan of 236 West Thirty-first street to drive him about town. Yerkes apparently fell asleep in the cab, for, after driving for several hours, Callahan had to spend five minutes in arousing his fare. Then he told Yerkes that he had calianan had to spend five minutes in arousing his fare. Then he told Yerkes that he had driven $4.50 worth, and that, before he went any further, he must pay up. Yerkes said he hadn't a cent.

"Buthold on," said he, "just drive me around to 1d! West Seventy-fifth street, and my wife will settle with you. She always pays my bills when I'm hard up,"

When he cab reached 161 every one had gone to bed, and the cabman tackled his fare again. Yerkes told him to wait a moment. Then he applied his flets and feet to the front deor. When Mrs, Yerkes and her mother appeared at an upper window and ordered the disturber to leave, the cabman, who was now out of temper, loudly demanded his $4.50 again. An altercation followed, during which it is said Yerkes used words that drove his mother-in-law away from the window.

Mrs. Yerkes finally settled matters by ringing up Policeman Lasner of the West Sixty-eighth street station. On her complaint, the policeman bundled Yerkes and Caliahan into the cab, and, accompanied by Mrs. Yerkes, drove to the station house. There Callahan explained his share in the midnight disturbance, and Mrs. Yerkes withdrew her complaint against him. Her husband was again locked up for the night. In the Yorkville Police Court later in the morning Mrs. Yerkes told Magistrate Crane that the prisoner was a constant annoyance to her mother and herself, and that she couldn't get morning Mrs. Yerkes told Magistrate Crane that the prisoner was a constant annoyance to her mother and herself, and that she couldn't get rid of him.

"Your Honor," explained Yerkes, "it's that woman's fault; she is continually bleeding me of money. Only last week I gave her $1,000 on her promise that she would marry me again. When she got the money she shook me. I guess I've the right to go to her house after that, haven't I?"

Magistrate Crane said he hadn't.

"You were before me on Sunday," said he, "and I discharged you on your promise not to annoy Mrs. Morgan or her household again. I shall now hold you in $1,000 ball to answer."

Lawyer Thomas G. Fennell, who appeared in behalf of Yerkes, said he would get his client liberated on a writ of habeas corpus.

Damage Suits from the Wyanoke-Columbia

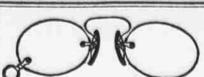

Collision, United States Commissioner Lyman began taking testimony yesterday regarding the value of the wreckage of the steamship Wyanoke of the Old Dominion line, which sank after collision with the United States cruiser Columbia off Newport Newson April 28 last. Three lives were Newport Newson April 28 last. Three lives were lost and the passengers on the Wyanoke lost all their baggage. Claims for damages to a large amount have been made against the steamship company. The company has petitioned for the benefit of the limitation of listility under sections 4.28:4.285 of the Revised Statutes, by which it is provided that all claims must, in certain cases, be paid out of the wreckage, which in this instance amounts to but a few hundred dollars. The damage claimed by the Government alone amounts to $3,000. Government alone amounts to $3,000.

Must Divide Damages and Costs.

On the afternoon of June 12, 1895, the steam ship Deutschland, owned by the Deutsch-Amer-canishe Petroleum Gesellschaft, collided in Gedney's Channel with the International Navigation Company's steamship Noordland. Both vessels Company's steamship Noordland. Both vessels were damaged, and cross suits were begin in the United States District Court before Judge Brown, the Deutschland's owners suing for $25,000 and the International Company for $15,000. Upon the trial there was much conflicting testimony regarding signals, courses, &c. Judge Brown has handed down a decision in which he holds that both vessels were to biame for the collision, as each violated rules of navigation, and he decrees that, after proper estimate of actual damages has been made, the damages and costs shall be divided between the litigasts.

Roundsman John Buckley, who was restore to that grade by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, was examined at Police Head quarters resterlay for promotion to a Sergeant-cy. The Police Commissioners gave him only a merit percentage of 30. If his civil service ex-amination was perfect he could only get 35, which would make a total of 65 per cent. This is ten marks below the percentage necessary to get a place on the eligible list.

THE NEW TOMBS PRISON.

reliminary Plans Submitted by Architects Withers and Dickson, Mesers, Withers and Dickson, the architects, called on Mayor Strong yesterday and showed him the preliminary plans or studies for the alterations that are to be made in the Tombs prison. They are to go to Commissioner Wright, and if he approves them they will be laid before the Board of Estimate, which will refer them the Board of Estimate, which will refer them to its architect, George B. Post. They also have to go through the hands of the State Board of Prisons and the Building Department.
The plans contemplate tearing down the two larger buildings, one of which faces on Centre street and the other on Elm street. There are also two smaller buildings, which will either be torn down and replaced or will be built up three stories higher than at present. In place of the also two smaller buildings, which will either be torn down and replaced or will be built up three stories higher than at present. In place of the two larger buildings it is proposed to erect two eight-story buildings. These may be of brick with steel interiors, but Architect Post suggests that stone would be more suitable.

In the preliminary plans the Centre street building is so arranged as to contain 322 cells, or about forty on each floor. The rear building is to have 300 cells. With the addition to the small prisons the number of cells will be brought up to nearly 1,000, as against 283 at present. Each cell will be larger than 8 feet by 5. At the end of each tier of ten cells will be a bathroom. Elevators will be provided for carrying the prisoners up and down. Kitchens and pantries will be provided for, and a special restaurant will be put on one of the upper doors to provide with extra food such of the prisoners as can pay for it.

One of the features of the new prison will be a set of light, airy rooms for the detention of persons merely under suspicion. Rooms for exercise will be put on the top floor. Separate rooms will be provided for young criminals, boys and girls.

The Warden's quarters, with those of the physicians, keepers, and matrons, and a public reception room, will be on the ground floor. Work under the plans is not likely to be begun before fail.

COL. ABERNETHY EXPECTED TO GO. If He Docen't Leave the Regiment, Seven-

Abernethy will be asked to explain why he sanctioned or, as some say, directed the change in the order of formation of the Memorial Day parade which permitted the Police Department to take the right of line after the Grand Marshal had assigned the regiment to that place. Seven-teen of the line officers have their resignations teen of the line officers have their resignations ready, but it is said that they may not present them. Col. Abernethy having intimated that he would resign rather than see the regiment broken up. He will not resign, however, until the present trouble has blown over, as he does not desire to have anybody think that he was forced out. If the dissatisfied officers can be convinced that Col. Abernethy will resign in the near future, they will withhold their resignations.

Col. Abernethy's supporters, who are said to be in the majority, declare positively that he will not resign. If he should, they say, a great many others would go with him. Major Robert E. Smith is the most likely candidate to succeed Col. Abernethy in case he should retire.
